The anticipated new book by award-winning and best-selling illustrator Bruce Whatley and two exciting new writers turn bedtime into an adventure

NOISES AT NIGHT

Illustrated by Bruce Whatley

Written by Beth Raisner Glass and Susan Lubner

An enthusiastic, rhyming bedtime book perfect for teaching restless youngsters that even going to sleep can be fun, Noises at Night is brimming with exciting adventures illustrated in vibrant colors by beloved illustrator Bruce Whatley. A young boy, with his dog and teddy bear by his side, uses his imagination (instead of the electronic media so predominant in children's lives today) to turn the ordinary sounds of a house at sleep time into extraordinary activities waiting to happen.

Drrroppp, Drrroppp drips the faucet I hear down the hall... begins one adventure, as the boy imagines himself a fearless captain on the open sea.

Taapp, Taapp knocks a branch that falls down from a tree... begins another, as the boy becomes a baseball player scoring a homerun.

Crreeak, Crreeak squeaks my bed when I turn on my side...yet another adventure begins, as the boy is outfitted as an explorer opening a newly discovered treasure chest in an ancient vault.

Children will want to experience the boy's adventures—from becoming a snake charmer to a baseball champion, a police officer to a cowboy—time and again, and will likely doze off dreaming up their own. Parents and educators will appreciate the inspiration the book provides for getting children into bed or for settling them down at nap time, and for its quick look at the range of career options kids have to look forward to. With an unbeatable illustrator-and-author team, Noises at Night is the ultimate bedtime book filled with imagination to ensure that there will be no more sleepless nights.
